What do students love about Mediasite?

Students love the ability to stop, start and repeat, helping them take better notes.

The University of Maryland, Baltimore turned the tables on traditional teaching and learning with academic video and cultivated more engaged, successful and higher-performing students. It leveraged Mediasite video to boost its ranks, retention and student success.

"Typical course offerings are very intense and highly visual," said Dr. James Craig, University of Maryland School of Dentistry professor and educational consultant. "Each student needs to have a front row seat."

Mediasite has also allowed the program to implement a more flexible curriculum, to resounding student endorsement.

- Attendance is not required (unless there's a guest lecturer or hands-on lesson)
- The entire curriculum is available to students 24/7
- Students repeating courses use online lectures to save faculty time

"One student summed up the Mediasite experience stating, 'It is the source of my academic success. My grades would really suffer if I didn't have Mediasite'" said Doug Brotherton, instructional technology specialist, University of Maryland, Baltimore. "With feedback like that, how can you not continue to push the boundaries?"
